Your own social media account

If you are currently logged in to your social media account as a user, a cookie with your account ID is stored on your end device. This enables the social media operator to track that you have visited a social media website and how you have used it.

Social media buttons integrated into websites (so-called plug-ins) enable the social media operator to record your visits to these website pages and assign them to your account. This data can be used to offer you content or advertising tailored to you.

If you want to avoid this, you should log out of your account or deactivate the "stay logged in" function, delete the cookies on your device and close and restart your browser. This will delete social media information that can directly identify you. This allows you to use our social media website without revealing your account ID. When you access interactive features of the website (e.g., like, comment, share, message), an account login screen will appear. If you register, you will again be recognisable as a defined user for the relevant social media operator.

Your rights

For information on how you can manage or delete the information held about you, please see the social media support pages and this page: www.youngdata.de
